A MONSTROUS CRIME.

FOUR of the best known men of Goldfield have lost their lives owing to the criminal carelessness and wanton neglect of another resident of the same town. There was no one else to blame. The dead men were known as the best type of citizens, whose records as business and professional men had never been blemished by the unhallowed pleasures of joy riding. They were sober, upright and honorable men who had distinguished themselves in their several walks of life as exemplars of good citizenship, enterprising, optimistic and generous. Each one owed prominence to his own ambition and well directed energy. They were the very highest of their class and every man who knew any of the ill-fated party feels honored today by the friendship that closed with untimely graves. Flashes in Goldfield float at half mast today. The town is in mourning. The loss is taken as the severest grief that has befallen the camp that in joy and sorrow, prosperity and misfortune always stood radiant with the hopefulness that characterizes that camp.

The cause. Carelessness, criminal conduct that cannot be condoned. No matter what the coroner's jury may say, the conviction will always rest that the lives of these worthy citizens could have been spared had it not been for the unforgivable offense of leaving a wrecked machine on a desert highway that is one of the most constantly traveled in the state of Nevada. For almost twenty-four hours a wrecked machine was allowed to rest partially in the road, blocking the way of all motorists and presenting a standing menace to the safety of every person whose business called them to the sister city of the desert. The obstacle was within ten miles of Goldfield, where repairs could have been made and the machine removed from the highway but, so far as known, no effort was made to hasten the removal of the obstruction that imperiled the lives of many. The owner could have done something to mitigate the danger, but he failed to raise a finger. At a trifling expense the machine could have been hauled out of the way and the road left free for traffic. Perhaps this thought did not enter the mind of the frivolous owner. Perhaps procrastination was responsible for this terrible tragedy. Perhaps the one man who is directly responsible for the loss of four estimable lives can find some means of satisfying his own conscience that he had no share in the misfortune. If he succeeds in applying any balm to his own feelings he must be superhuman who is insensitive to the ineffable injury his neglect has brought to four homes. His explanations cannot be accepted as sincere. His actions cannot be condoned. He is guilty of a crime against his fellow being without the slightest extenuation. His regrets will not bring back the breath of life to the forms that now lie cold in death, nor will they assuage the grief of families deprived of their breadwinners. His repining will not requite the widow for the loss of her loving husband, who may possibly have been the sole means of support in the heyday of life without a thought for the necessity for providing for his dependents.

Tears will not bring back to the mother the embracing arms of a sturdy boy in the full flush of manhood. Therefore let it go down as one of the epics of the desert that the greatest tragedy of our isolated life was due to the criminal carelessness of one man.

Responsibility for the crime may not be placed under the law, but there is a law far superior to that of any man made body and that calls for atonement. That there is no law providing a penalty for such culpability is due to the selfish interests that keep legislators busy with their personal affairs, but this awful sacrifice should not be forgotten seven months hence when the legislators assemble once more in Carson City. They should act and act quickly that the law of the road may carry with it some responsibility and that those who choose to violate the regulations may be called to account.

Tonopah joins hands today with Goldfield over the biers of four men whose untimely ending comes as a sequel to a fraternal mission, conveying a message of brotherly love and cementing the affection that has always existed between the two towns.

General Huerta has the price. He will resign if all his acts as provisional president of Mexico are legalized. The price is too great for the service, especially as it is plain to all that he is gradually being pushed out.

"I do washing, too," said Madame Schumann-Heink, testifying in her suit for divorce from William Rapp, Jr. Divorce suits are rather famous for the washing of dirty linen.

It is said Carranza holds the key to the diplomatic situation at Niagara Falls. Is it a skeleton key?

DEALS WILL HELP OLD CHERRY CREEK TO COME BACK

HUNTER MINES THERE TO RESUME OPERATION INSIDE OF A MONTH.

Judge J. H. Leishman, of Cherry Creek, Nev., who has been in Salt Lake for two or three days, closed one deal and practically completed another that mean a great deal for that famous old White Pine county camp, says the Tribune. He departed for home last evening.

Some legal formalities, which will require about sixty days to complete, remain to consummate an agreement for a consolidation of interests on the part of two prominent Egan canyon properties. This working arrangement is expected to be of the greatest benefit to both and will bring into activity in a very short time both of these mines, which have been idle for a number of years. These two properties together now have something like 65,000 or 70,000 tons of ore blocked out, and the understanding just reached involves a campaign of development and production that will put new life into the picturesque and historic canyon and the beautifully located old town of Cherry Creek.

Arrangements have been completed by the Boston owners, whose representatives came here for that purpose, by which the noted old Hunter mines, twenty-two miles southwest of Cherry Creek, will resume operations in about three weeks. Leasers took out some ore from these mines in 1913, but the mines were closed at the end of the year and have since been idle. Ample capital has now been provided to equip and operate the properties, and inside of three months their ores will be coming into this market. A hydro compress and a new hoist are to be installed at once. The ores from these mines, in addition to their lead and silver values, carry from 5 to 6 per cent copper and an iron content, which greatly reduces the smelting charges. The ore can be transported from the mine to the smelter at Murray for $9.25, the wagon haul for the twenty-two miles being $6 a ton and the freight rate from Cherry Creek here $3.25.

Hunter is an old camp that was famous thirty years ago, and the mines were heavy producers at that time. A smelter was operated there for a long time in the old days, but its methods were primitive and considerable values went into the big slag dump that it created. E. E. Vanderhoff, of Ely, had a lease on this dump, which he practically cleaned up not very long ago at a very satisfactory profit. It is said. He made use of a small jig in his operations.

Judge Leishman has been a resident of Cherry Creek for a dozen years and has been state representative of the Wide West Mining company, which has extensive holdings in that section. He is thoroughly familiar with the mining situation and resources of that section of the Sagebrush state and has an abiding faith in the future of the mining industry of the Cherry Creek region. He says that so far as the town itself is concerned one of the things it needs is to organize a boosting club. He believes that the new work which is being gotten under way there will be of inestimable benefit to the old camp.
